Reuseit.com is a place where you will find our family of "best of the best" reusables available in many categories so you can eliminate disposables from every part of your life -- from bags and bottles to lunch, household items and beyond. By casting a critical eye and delivering facts & solutions, we continue to help guide consumers to the truth and take action on these issues as they evolve.

They don't just sell products but offer lots of DIY ideas to replace disposables in your life. Lots of "take action" ideas. As I look thru the ideas, I'm reminded of the stories my Grandfather tells about living through the Depression.

I'm afraid I missed sending this out, but I thought people might be interested in the Northern Forest Canoe Trail and the Northern Forest Explorers Youth Program

Hello,

I would like to formally invite you to Long Lake Central School to hear a presentation by Roger Poor of the Northern Forest Canoe Trail (NFCT) organization. If you are not familiar with this canoe route or the work that the Northern Forest Canoe Trail organization does, then please check them out at www.northernforestcanoetrail.org

<http://www.northernforestcanoetrail.org/>. This organization has received funding from the US Department of Justice to provide outdoor programming for rural youth in communities along its 740-mile, multi-state water trail route in 2011.

Roger Poor will be at Long Lake Central School on Thursday, March 3rd at 3pm to share the successes of NFCT's pilot program in Maine and New Hampshire and to discuss with us the opportunities for our youth in the Long Lake Region. Roger and the entire staff at NFCT know that the only way for this program to be successful is to engage the public from the beginning and that is why Roger has asked me to reach out to a wide variety of adults and professionals in the Long Lake and greater Hamilton County Community.

If you can make this presentation then please RSVP at trailblazers@frontiernet.net <<mailto:trailblazers@frontiernet.net>> and/or pass this email on to someone you know that could help see this project be a success for our youth, our region of the Adirondacks and New York as a whole.

Please see the attachment for the letter written by Roger Poor.

Thank you

To the community of Newcomb, thank you very much for your support of the interpretive center transition to ESF, and in particular to the community members who were able to join us for an update and brainstorming session on Saturday the 12th. We greatly appreciated the ideas, suggestions and conversation.

This was not a one-time only event and for those unable to attend the meeting please know we welcome your ideas too: contact Paul Hai anytime to share your thoughts and suggestions.

Developing and instituting new programming will be an ongoing process and we appreciate your patience over the weeks and months, and in some cases longer, that it will take to bring some of the many great recommendations to life.

Thanks very much,

Paul Hai

Student's project argues for Muslim community center in New York in the Boos and Bravos Section

/Bravos to Taylor Goodspeed, a junior in the Newcomb school district, for having the courage to take a stand on a particularly controversial issue for his annual class project. And Bravos to his teachers and administrators for letting him do it. For his project, Taylor came out in support of a controversial Muslim community center planned for just outside the site of the World Trade Center bombings. He went to New York City to interview the developer of the project and prepared a report in favor of it, on the basis of religious freedom. For his stance, he took a lot of flak from fellow students and members of the community. Whether you agree with his position or not, it's difficult not to admire him for taking a stance and for the work he put into defending it./

And on that note, the school hosted, this past week, a wonderful exposition of the creative pieces that went along with their student presentations. Very creative, well thought out and intelligent. Great job Newcomb students and teachers!
